Ingredients

Makes 4 Servings

- red onion (1/2)
- garlic (2 cloves)
- ginger (1/2 inch (1.3 centimeters))
- iodized salt (1/8 teaspoon (0.6 milliliter))
- red cabbage (1/4 head)
- carrot (1)
- gluten-free noodles (8 ounces (227 grams))
- broccoli (1/2 head)
- cubed ready-made baked marinated tofu (1 cup (240 grams))
- corn kernels (1/2 cup (83 grams))
- wheat-free tamari (1 tablespoon (15 milliliters))
- maple syrup (2 teaspoons (10 milliliters))
- brown rice vinegar (2 teaspoons (10 milliliters))
- fresh parsley (1/4 bunch)

Directions

1. Heat the 2 tablespoons (30 mL) water in a large skillet over medium heat. Thinly slice the onion into half-moons. Add the sliced onion, minced garlic, peeled and minced ginger, and a pinch of salt (optional). Cook and stir for 3 minutes.
2. Add the cabbage, about 2 cups (218 g) thinly sliced, and 1 cup (122 g) matchstick-style carrots, and cook and stir for 1 minute. Cook the noodles according to the package directions.
3. Chop broccoli spears—about 1/2 cup (45 g). Add the cooked noodles, broccoli, tofu, corn (fresh or frozen), tamari, syrup (can use gluten-free brown rice syrup, if preferred), and vinegar. Stir gently. (I like to use bamboo cooking chopsticks for this.) Cover and cook for 5 to 10 more minutes, or until all the vegetables are tender but still brightly colored. Serve hot, garnished with the chopped parsley.
4. Note: To make homemade baked marinated tofu, preheat the oven to 350 F (177 C). Slice 14 ounces (397 g) of firm or extra-firm tofu into bite-size cubes. Spread the cubes in a single layer on a baking sheet and sprinkle them evenly with 1 tablespoon (15 mL) of wheat-free tamari. Bake for 30 minutes, carefully turning the cubes over after 15 minutes.
